Some employers recruit graduates after a half hour personal interview. This is done in a formal setting, between two people, one of whom controls the conversation. There are always parts of interviews which are different from what is expected. The interviewer may not start at the beginning, and this can be difficult. You will have to order and clarify your thoughts quickly as the interviewer jumps from one point to the other. "Situational questions" are where the interviewer describes a work situation and asks for your solution. Generally you are recommended to think aloud - identify the key points and clarify the information, adding a dash of common sense.

In some cases, you will encounter panel interviews, where you will meet two, three or more interviewers at the same time. It is usual in such cases for the question topics to be split up between the interviewers, so that for example one will cover your academic record, the second concentrating on your reasons for wanting the job, and so on. You will have to build up rapport with each interviewer, adapt to his/her style, and concentrate on the abrupt change of topic. You should try and remember who is who - not their names, but their job or position, so that your answers are given at an appropriate level.

Remember that an interview is a two way process, and you should use the opportunity to ask questions. At the end of the interview you should have enough information to make a decision, if the job is offered to you.

A massive investigation into mobile phone safety has failed to rule out risks of brain damage and cancer. Experts say there are still large gaps in scientific knowledge about what radiation is doing to users' bodies and brains. The results of a three-year study highlighted continuing uncertainty over the safety of handsets. Parents were urged to limit mobile phone use by children because of the potential damage. Campaigners have long feared that users of Britain's 50 million phones are risking cancer, brain damage, Alzheimer's disease, sleeping disorders and memory loss because of radiation emitted by handsets directly into the head. Now the report says there may be other hidden problems because mobiles have been in widespread use among British people for only a few years.

Professor Anthony Simons, who led the study, said: 'We cannot be sure what will be found and the possibility of an effect still remains'. 'It's still early days, particularly on the use of handsets,' he added. 'There could still be effects we don't know about. We can't predict what we are going to learn tomorrow. In the meantime, excessive use of mobile phones by young children should be discouraged. While children are growing and developing, they are more susceptible to all sorts of things. About a quarter of mobile phone users are under 18, with many having been given them by their parents so they can easily stay in touch. Those under ten are thought to be particularly vulnerable because their skulls are thinner and may allow radiation to penetrate deeper into the brain. Also their nervous systems are still developing'.

CONVOCATORIAS DE XUÑO E SETEMBRO

1. Puntuación:

Primeira pregunta	2 puntos
Segunda pregunta	1 punto
Terceira pregunta	2 puntos
Cuarta pregunta	2 puntos
Quinta pregunta	3 puntos

2. Terase en conta a comprensión, expresión e corrección escritas. Por unha parte, o corrector valorará se existe comprensión total ou parcial do texto por parte do alumno. Por outra parte, o corrector terá en conta, asimesmo, a capacidade do alumno para comunicarse de forma efectiva (avaliación da súa competencia comunicativa), a coherencia e ordenación lóxica na exposición das ideas, a riqueza do léxico, sen esquencer a expresión gramatical correcta (competencia lingüística) das respostas.

3. Se existise unha comprensión total do texto xunto cunha expresión gramatical correcta, a puntuación será máxima, sempre que o alumno aporte elementos expresivos personais.

4. Se existise unha comprensión total do texto, pero a expresión non fora gramaticalmente correcta, faranse as deducións oportunas dependendo da gravidade da incorrección ou erro. As deducións faranse, entón, axustándose á importancia cualitativa do erro e ó número de erros que se cometan na mesma pregunta. A modo orientativo, lémbrese que erros de expresión básicos (faltas de concordancia, indebida ou inexacta orde de palabras, fallos na formación de interrogativas ou negativas, etc.) serán penalizados de forma considerable.

5. Se a comprensión é parcial a puntuación máxima asignada á pregunta verase reducida dacordo coa gravidade da falta de comprensión.

6. Se non hai comprensión algunha, a pregunta non pode ter ningún tipo de calificación positiva.

7. Os erros ortográficos puntuaranse negativamente dacordo co número e importancia deles (serán máis graves en palabras básicas da lingua inglesa). Ponderarase asimismo a súa frecuencia relativa e terase en conta como criterio cualitativo a aparición de erros nas formas do vocabulario básico do nivel. Como criterio xeral, deberá penalizarse, como mínimo, unha décima por erro ortográfico. Un erro repetido na mesma palabra só se penalizará unha vez.

8. Se se transcribira literalmente un fragmento do texto como resposta a todas ou a unha das preguntas, aínda que o devandito fragmento estivese relacionado co contido da pregunta, valorarase cunha puntuación máxima do 50% do total atribuíble á puntuación correspondente a cada pregunta ou cuestión. Polo que debe interpretarse que non necesariamente a puntuación debe ser un 0,5.

SOLUCIONES CONVOCATORIA DE XUÑO

OPCIÓN 1 (POSSIBLE ANSWER)

1. The best title for this text is “An interview for a job” because the author describes the different kinds of interviews for jobs and the best way to prepare yourself for an interview and answer the questions well.

2. a) This means “to be divided” or “to be shared”.

b) This means “a little common sense”.

3. a) The interviewer may not start at the beginning.

Perhaps the interview will not start at the beginning.

b) You are recommended to think aloud.

Thinking aloud is recommended.

4. a) They mention personal interviews and panel interviews in the text.

b) They advise the interviewee to make a good relationship with each interviewer, adapt to his/her way of behaving, and concentrate on the sudden change of topic, to try and remember which person is which - not their names, but their job or position, so that the answers are given well.

5. In order to get a job I would first pass all of my exams in my studies. Secondly, I would try to practise my speciality in a company where they need an employee, and finally I would look for a job with a good salary near my home. However, if I could not find it I would look for one on the Internet or in the newspapers in another city or country. I think I would try to prepare the interview well, as the text says, as it is very important, and wear good clothes for it.

OPCIÓN 2 (POSSIBLE ANSWER)

1. The best title for this text is “The dangers of mobile phones” because it describes how mobile phones may give us dangerous radiation through our heads into our brains.

2. a) “Widespread use” means that a lot of people use them everywhere.

b) “Potential damage” is damage which they think mobile phones could cause in the future.

3. a) ‘We can’t predict what we are going to learn tomorrow’, the Professor said.

The Professor said that they / we couldn’t predict what they / we were going to learn in the future / tomorrow.

b) Parents were urged by investigators to limit mobile phone use by children.

Investigators urged parents to limit mobile phone use by children.

4. a) The possibility of problems still remains because we do not know everything about the effects of mobile phones, as they have only been in use for a few years.

b) The report is not certain about the effects of mobile phones but warns about the possible effects, especially on young children.

5. I am personally in favour of mobile phones for many reasons. Firstly, I feel safer if I take one with me when I go out at night. My parents can phone me if they feel worried, and on the other hand I can phone them in an emergency, if I miss the last bus or if there are not any taxis near. The mobile phone is useful if you want to arrange to meet your friends. I especially like it when my friends send me messages because in that way they are really telling me they are interested in me.
